

<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Running Time</li> <li>• Narrator Name</li> </ul>	3:03 Roshan Khadivi
	<table border="1"> <thead> <tr> <th data-bbox="527 237 1036 268">Script</th> <th data-bbox="1036 237 1521 268">Shotlist</th> </tr> </thead> <tbody> <tr> <td data-bbox="527 268 1036 1816"> Abdul Qayum Habibi and his wife Shafiqah Habibi are two of the many dedicated community health workers from the village of Cheke in Guazara district which is a two hour bus ride from Herat, the provincial capital, in western Afghanistan. Community health workers, operating at the grass roots level, are chosen through the local shura, or committees, based on trust and capabilities. After being chosen by the village, Mr. and Mrs. Habibi had six months training where they learnt about first aid activities as well as how to work with families in raising awareness and how to make referrals to the nearest health centres. Gozara hospital lies just outside Herat city. The focal point for the 214 community health workers in the 307 sub-districts is chief doctor Abdel Ahad. SOUNDBITE (Pashto) Dr. Abdel Ahad, Sub-district Chief: "The advantage is that they're citizens of the community, and they're familiar with local health issues. They take the training we provide and put it into action in each village." Working as a couple has distinct advantages in a conservative society such as Afghanistan, where many women do not work or play only a small role outside the home...or none at all. SOUNDBITE (Pashto) Abdul Qayum Habibi, Community Health Worker: "In this backwards society, women are not allowed to work. I'm happy that my wife is working side by side with me. Unmarried couples would not be allowed to work together. If she encounters problems, I can reach out and help her." SOUNDBITE (Pashto) Shafiqah Habibi, Community Health Worker: "Men and women are encouraging us to do this work; it's a valuable way to contribute to the cause. It's much easier in a society like Afghanistan for women to work with their own gender." The role of Community Health Workers is especially vital in a country where access to hospitals and health clinics is so restricted by insecurity, bad weather and inadequate roads. SOUNDBITE (Pashto) Dr. Abdel Ahad, Sub-district Chief: "Community health workers are one of the most effective programmes in Afghanistan, but the challenge is that they are very poor and we cannot pay them – they're volunteers. More support from the Government </td> <td data-bbox="1036 268 1521 1816"> <ol style="list-style-type: none"> <li>1. Med shot, Habibi family</li> <li>2. Graphic push, map of Afghanistan</li> <li>3. Wide shot, city of Herat</li> <li>4. Close up, male community health worker</li> <li>5. Reverse shot, speaking to gathered people</li> <li>6. Wide shot, interior of hospital, community workers</li> <li>7. Med shot, community health worker speaking to woman</li> <li>8. Med shot, over shoulder of woman, community health worker</li> <li>9. Wide shot Gazara hospital</li> <li>10. Med shot, sign for Gazara hospital</li> <li>11. Med shot, sign on gate, rifle with red X over it</li> <li>12. SOUNDBITE (Pashto) Dr. Abdel Ahad, Sub-district Chief: "The advantage is that they're citizens of the community, and they're familiar with local health issues. They take the training we provide and put it into action in each village."</li> <li>13. Med shot, mosaic wall with women in burkas walking by</li> <li>14. Med shot, crowded marketplace</li> <li>15. SOUNDBITE(Pashto)Abdul Qayum Habibi, Community Health Worker: "In this backwards society, women are not allowed to work. I'm happy that my wife is working side by side with me. Unmarried couples would not be allowed to work together. If she encounters problems, I can reach out and help her."</li> <li>16. SOUNDBITE (Pashto) Shafiqah Habibi, Community Health Worker: "Men and women are encouraging us to do this work; it's a valuable way to contribute to the cause. It's much easier in a society like Afghanistan for women to work with their own gender."</li> <li>17. Wide shot, pan right, people gathered outside building</li> <li>18. Wide shot, trucks driving through dust</li> <li>19. SOUNDBITE (Pashto) Dr. Abdel Ahad, Sub-district Chief: "Community health workers are one of the most effective programmes in Afghanistan, but the challenge is that they are very poor and we cannot pay them – they're volunteers. More support from the Government and NGO partners is needed."</li> <li>20. Wide shot, women in black burkas walking along street</li> <li>21. Med shot, over shoulder, woman with child opens door for community</li> </ol> </td> </tr> </tbody> </table>	Script	Shotlist	Abdul Qayum Habibi and his wife Shafiqah Habibi are two of the many dedicated community health workers from the village of Cheke in Guazara district which is a two hour bus ride from Herat, the provincial capital, in western Afghanistan. Community health workers, operating at the grass roots level, are chosen through the local shura, or committees, based on trust and capabilities. After being chosen by the village, Mr. and Mrs. Habibi had six months training where they learnt about first aid activities as well as how to work with families in raising awareness and how to make referrals to the nearest health centres. Gozara hospital lies just outside Herat city. The focal point for the 214 community health workers in the 307 sub-districts is chief doctor Abdel Ahad. SOUNDBITE (Pashto) Dr. Abdel Ahad, Sub-district Chief: "The advantage is that they're citizens of the community, and they're familiar with local health issues. They take the training we provide and put it into action in each village." Working as a couple has distinct advantages in a conservative society such as Afghanistan, where many women do not work or play only a small role outside the home...or none at all. SOUNDBITE (Pashto) Abdul Qayum Habibi, Community Health Worker: "In this backwards society, women are not allowed to work. I'm happy that my wife is working side by side with me. Unmarried couples would not be allowed to work together. If she encounters problems, I can reach out and help her." SOUNDBITE (Pashto) Shafiqah Habibi, Community Health Worker: "Men and women are encouraging us to do this work; it's a valuable way to contribute to the cause. It's much easier in a society like Afghanistan for women to work with their own gender." The role of Community Health Workers is especially vital in a country where access to hospitals and health clinics is so restricted by insecurity, bad weather and inadequate roads. SOUNDBITE (Pashto) Dr. Abdel Ahad, Sub-district Chief: "Community health workers are one of the most effective programmes in Afghanistan, but the challenge is that they are very poor and we cannot pay them – they're volunteers. More support from the Government	<ol style="list-style-type: none"> <li>1. Med shot, Habibi family</li> <li>2. Graphic push, map of Afghanistan</li> <li>3. Wide shot, city of Herat</li> <li>4. Close up, male community health worker</li> <li>5. Reverse shot, speaking to gathered people</li> <li>6. Wide shot, interior of hospital, community workers</li> <li>7. Med shot, community health worker speaking to woman</li> <li>8. Med shot, over shoulder of woman, community health worker</li> <li>9. Wide shot Gazara hospital</li> <li>10. Med shot, sign for Gazara hospital</li> <li>11. Med shot, sign on gate, rifle with red X over it</li> <li>12. SOUNDBITE (Pashto) Dr. Abdel Ahad, Sub-district Chief: "The advantage is that they're citizens of the community, and they're familiar with local health issues. They take the training we provide and put it into action in each village."</li> <li>13. Med shot, mosaic wall with women in burkas walking by</li> <li>14. Med shot, crowded marketplace</li> <li>15. SOUNDBITE(Pashto)Abdul Qayum Habibi, Community Health Worker: "In this backwards society, women are not allowed to work. I'm happy that my wife is working side by side with me. Unmarried couples would not be allowed to work together. If she encounters problems, I can reach out and help her."</li> <li>16. SOUNDBITE (Pashto) Shafiqah Habibi, Community Health Worker: "Men and women are encouraging us to do this work; it's a valuable way to contribute to the cause. It's much easier in a society like Afghanistan for women to work with their own gender."</li> <li>17. Wide shot, pan right, people gathered outside building</li> <li>18. Wide shot, trucks driving through dust</li> <li>19. SOUNDBITE (Pashto) Dr. Abdel Ahad, Sub-district Chief: "Community health workers are one of the most effective programmes in Afghanistan, but the challenge is that they are very poor and we cannot pay them – they're volunteers. More support from the Government and NGO partners is needed."</li> <li>20. Wide shot, women in black burkas walking along street</li> <li>21. Med shot, over shoulder, woman with child opens door for community</li> </ol>
Script	Shotlist
Abdul Qayum Habibi and his wife Shafiqah Habibi are two of the many dedicated community health workers from the village of Cheke in Guazara district which is a two hour bus ride from Herat, the provincial capital, in western Afghanistan. Community health workers, operating at the grass roots level, are chosen through the local shura, or committees, based on trust and capabilities. After being chosen by the village, Mr. and Mrs. Habibi had six months training where they learnt about first aid activities as well as how to work with families in raising awareness and how to make referrals to the nearest health centres. Gozara hospital lies just outside Herat city. The focal point for the 214 community health workers in the 307 sub-districts is chief doctor Abdel Ahad. SOUNDBITE (Pashto) Dr. Abdel Ahad, Sub-district Chief: "The advantage is that they're citizens of the community, and they're familiar with local health issues. They take the training we provide and put it into action in each village." Working as a couple has distinct advantages in a conservative society such as Afghanistan, where many women do not work or play only a small role outside the home...or none at all. SOUNDBITE (Pashto) Abdul Qayum Habibi, Community Health Worker: "In this backwards society, women are not allowed to work. I'm happy that my wife is working side by side with me. Unmarried couples would not be allowed to work together. If she encounters problems, I can reach out and help her." SOUNDBITE (Pashto) Shafiqah Habibi, Community Health Worker: "Men and women are encouraging us to do this work; it's a valuable way to contribute to the cause. It's much easier in a society like Afghanistan for women to work with their own gender." The role of Community Health Workers is especially vital in a country where access to hospitals and health clinics is so restricted by insecurity, bad weather and inadequate roads. SOUNDBITE (Pashto) Dr. Abdel Ahad, Sub-district Chief: "Community health workers are one of the most effective programmes in Afghanistan, but the challenge is that they are very poor and we cannot pay them – they're volunteers. More support from the Government	<ol style="list-style-type: none"> <li>1. Med shot, Habibi family</li> <li>2. Graphic push, map of Afghanistan</li> <li>3. Wide shot, city of Herat</li> <li>4. Close up, male community health worker</li> <li>5. Reverse shot, speaking to gathered people</li> <li>6. Wide shot, interior of hospital, community workers</li> <li>7. Med shot, community health worker speaking to woman</li> <li>8. Med shot, over shoulder of woman, community health worker</li> <li>9. Wide shot Gazara hospital</li> <li>10. Med shot, sign for Gazara hospital</li> <li>11. Med shot, sign on gate, rifle with red X over it</li> <li>12. SOUNDBITE (Pashto) Dr. Abdel Ahad, Sub-district Chief: "The advantage is that they're citizens of the community, and they're familiar with local health issues. They take the training we provide and put it into action in each village."</li> <li>13. Med shot, mosaic wall with women in burkas walking by</li> <li>14. Med shot, crowded marketplace</li> <li>15. SOUNDBITE(Pashto)Abdul Qayum Habibi, Community Health Worker: "In this backwards society, women are not allowed to work. I'm happy that my wife is working side by side with me. Unmarried couples would not be allowed to work together. If she encounters problems, I can reach out and help her."</li> <li>16. SOUNDBITE (Pashto) Shafiqah Habibi, Community Health Worker: "Men and women are encouraging us to do this work; it's a valuable way to contribute to the cause. It's much easier in a society like Afghanistan for women to work with their own gender."</li> <li>17. Wide shot, pan right, people gathered outside building</li> <li>18. Wide shot, trucks driving through dust</li> <li>19. SOUNDBITE (Pashto) Dr. Abdel Ahad, Sub-district Chief: "Community health workers are one of the most effective programmes in Afghanistan, but the challenge is that they are very poor and we cannot pay them – they're volunteers. More support from the Government and NGO partners is needed."</li> <li>20. Wide shot, women in black burkas walking along street</li> <li>21. Med shot, over shoulder, woman with child opens door for community</li> </ol>

	and NGO partners is needed.” Community health workers also play a role during the national immunization days in Afghanistan. They assist visiting vaccinators to identify families who have children under the age of five. In addition they work closely with health centres especially when patients need more immediate treatments. SOUNDBITE (Pashto) Abdul Qayum Habibi, Community Health Worker: “Compared to the Taliban time, many things have gotten somewhat better. People are now receiving more support and even medicine. We didn’t get any medicine during the Taliban years.” Community health workers play an invaluable role in providing basic healthcare to Afghans in rural areas in one of the most challenging countries in the world.	health workers 22. Close up, health workers working with child 23. SOUNDBITE (Pashto) Abdul Qayum Habibi, Community Health Worker: “Compared to the Taliban time, many things have gotten somewhat better. People are now receiving more support and even medicine. We didn’t get any medicine during the Taliban years.” 24. Wide shot, worker calling through bullhorn in village 25. Med shot, men gathered around, holding babies 26. Med shot, women crouching 27. Med shot, women crouching
<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• International version split track</li> <li>• Running Time</li> </ul>	Script Same as above	Shotlist
<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Video news footage 1</li> <li>• Running Time</li> </ul>	Shotlist
<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Video news footage 2</li> <li>• Running Time</li> </ul>	Shotlist
UNICEF PSA <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Note to NewsMarket: Always annotate PSAs running time as TRT: 30 seconds</li> </ul>
UNICEF Interview Running Time <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Name of person being interviewed</li> <li>• Name of person’s organization</li> <li>• Person’s title</li> </ul>	Xxx Xxx Xxx xxx Script	