

“ Sennappu had a split second, literally a heartbeat, to throw her body around her 18 month old daughter before the bomb landed. Her shielding body saved the life of her baby girl. Sennappu was killed instantly. ”

One of 250,000 urgent reasons why Sri Lanka's children need you.

It is urgent that we act now for the survival and recovery of children in Sri Lanka.

Already we are struggling to care for over 200,000 people displaced by the Sri Lanka conflict. We expect the number to reach at least a quarter of a million.

Thousands of those victims are children who have been wounded, recruited, displaced, separated and denied their every day needs.

We are desperately short of funds to provide them with medicines, clean water, sanitation and nourishment.

UNICEF and partners are working around the clock to provide millions of litres of water, constructing latrines, supporting mother and child health, establishing nutritional centres, building learning spaces for children, attempting to reunify separated children and caring for children who have been brutally orphaned by this conflict.

It is hard to overstate how urgent this crisis has become, which is why we need your help today.

What your money can buy:

RM50 can purchase 210 sachets of oral rehydration salts that help children combat dehydration and diarrhoea.

RM300 can provide 86 packets of high-energy biscuits for malnourished children.

RM800 can purchase a school-in-a-box kit to help 80 children continue with schooling.
