

Conference Participants

Samer Al-Samarrai is an education economist with areas of specialization in household demand for schooling in Sub-Saharan Africa, determinants of student achievement, household and public financing of education systems, educational planning and simulation models for educational development.

Nancy Busch is the Dean of Fordham's Graduate School of Social Sciences (GSAS), and the author of numerous research publications, including on parent-child relationships, particularly on socialization in Latino families and ethnic differences in parenting.

Luis Felipe Lopez-Calva is Chief Economist at the Regional Bureau of Latin America and the Caribbean of the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP), and has been published in journals on issues related to child labor, poverty, institutional economics and economic development.

Jingqing Chai is a Senior Advisor at the Social Policy and Economic Analysis Unit in the Policy and Practice group at UNICEF Headquarters, where she leads the effort to engage in social welfare system reforms in countries undertaking economic structural programmes.

Gáspár Fajth is Chief, Social Policy and Economic Analysis at UNICEF Headquarters, and was previously chief of the socioeconomic unit at UNICEF Innocenti Research Centre. He has edited, authored and co-authored several books and publications about child poverty, social conditions and public policies.

Radhika Gore spent four years with UNICEF, first at UNICEF's New York headquarters then later in Bangkok, at its regional office for East Asia and the Pacific, where she collaborated on UN-wide studies on migration, decentralization, and social protection.

Karen Grepin is an Assistant Professor of Global Health Policy at New York University's Wagner School for Public Service, and her research focuses on the economics and politics of health service delivery in developing countries, with a focus on sub-Saharan Africa.

Cielito Habito is currently Director of the Ateneo Center for Economic Research and Development, and previously served as Secretary of Socioeconomic Planning of the Philippines from 1992 to 1998, and as Chairman of the Sixth Session of the UN Commission on Sustainable Development (UNCSD) in 1998.

Ravi Karkara is a Child Participation Specialist with UNICEF's Adolescent Development and Participation (ADAP) Gender, Rights and Civic Engagement Section, Division of Policy and Practice.

Namsuk Kim is a Policy Analyst with UNDP's Office of Development Studies, researching on poverty, labor and human development issues using micro level data.

Warren Krafchik is the Director of the International Budget Partnership, working to enhance the effective participation of civil society organizations in public budgeting in developing and transition countries. Previously, he was founder of the Budget Information Service of the Institute for Democracy in South Africa.

Melissa Labonte is Assistant Professor of political science at Fordham University, where she focuses her research and training in international non-governmental organizations, international organizations and international law, multilateral peace operations, post-conflict peacebuilding, conflict resolution, human rights, humanitarian crises, and the politics of humanitarian intervention.

Subha Mani is Assistant Professor of Economics at Fordham University. Her research areas are in Development Economics, Applied Econometrics, Applied Microeconomics, Health, and Education.

Darryl McLeod is Professor of Economics at Fordham University, and specializes in international development and financial integration in emerging markets.

Ronald U. Mendoza is an Economist with UNICEF, and his policy background includes work with UNDP's Office of Development Studies, the Federal Reserve Bank of Boston, the Economist Intelligence Unit (EIU), and several non-governmental organizations in Manila, the Philippines. He leads work on public finance for children at UNICEF's Social and Economic Policy Unit in headquarters.

Leonardo Menchini is a researcher in the Socio-economic Policy Analysis Unit of the UNICEF Innocenti Research Centre, where he focuses on childhood poverty and policy responses, and child well-being indicators in developed and developing countries.

Alberto Minujin is a Professor at the Graduate Program in International Affairs, New School University, New York, and at the School of International and Public Affairs, Columbia University, New York. He conducts teaching and research on the topics of children, human rights, poverty, and monitoring, evaluation and social research methods.

Sophie Mitra is the director of the Social Justice and Policy Research Unit of Fordham University's Center for International Policy Studies, and she is also an Assistant Professor in the Department of Economics at Fordham University. Her research interests are in applied microeconomics, including in the following fields: development, employment, disability and health, and agricultural commodity markets.

Shantanu Mukherjee is a Senior Economist with UNDP's Bureau for Development Policy.

Gustave Nebie is Chief of Social and Economic Policy with the UNICEF Mali Country Office.

H. Dean Nielsen is an independent consultant working on education policy issues with DFID, the World Bank and UNICEF, and was formerly Task Manager for the Evaluation of the Bank's Assistance to Primary Education, Independent Evaluation Group.

Rada Noeva is a Programme and Planning Manager with the Gender and Human Rights Unit of UNICEF's Division of Policy and Planning.

Isabel Ortiz is Associate Director of UNICEF's Policy, Advocacy and Knowledge Management (PAKM) Section, and has over 15 years experience working in 30 countries in various areas of economic and social development. Previously, she held posts as senior advisor at the United Nations Department of Economic and Social Affairs (UNDESA), and as an economist at the Asian Development Bank (Manila, Philippines), where she was founding member of ADB's Poverty Unit.

Vivek Ramkumar works with the International Budget Partnership by conducting training seminars in budget analysis, providing technical assistance to budget advocacy groups around the world, and developing a comprehensive guide to methods useful for civil society organizations monitoring government expenditures and accounts.

Daniel Seymour is the Chief of the Gender and Rights Unit in UNICEF's Policy and Practice Group.

David Stewart is the Chief of the Policy Advocacy Unit in UNICEF's Policy and Practice Group.

Abdelmajid Tibouti is a Senior Adviser with UNICEF's Health Section, Program Division.

Enakshi Ganguly Thukral is the founder and co-Executive Director of HAQ: Centre for Child Rights, and has been involved in research, advocacy and training on wide-ranging socio-legal issues such as development induced displacement and those concerning women and children, including women in the unorganised sector, legal rights, reproductive health, child labour, laws and policies governing children, education and violence.

Samman Thapa is with the Social Policy and Economic Analysis Section, UNICEF, East Asia Pacific Regional Office (EAPRO).

Nina Thelen is a Policy Analyst with UNDP's Office of Development Studies, with current research interests in market-based strategies to reaching the Millennium Development Goals (MDGs), social policies and measuring progress of societies.

Luca Tiberti works with the UNICEF Innocenti Research Centre and is researching on health care financing in developing countries, child poverty and social policy, income and health inequalities, and the social and economic impacts of HIV/AIDS.

Gabriel Vergara is a Policy Analyst at UNICEF's Social Policy and Economic Analysis unit in New York, specializing in public finance for children.

Margaret Wachenfeld is the Senior Policy Adviser in the UNICEF Brussels office which is in charge of UNICEF's relations with the EU institutions to ensure that children are reflected in EU policy and development cooperation.

Jennifer Yablonski is a Social Protection Specialist with UNICEF's Social and Economic Policy Unit, Policy and Practice Group.

Yongzheng Yang is a Deputy Division Chief with the IMF's Strategy and Policy Review Department.

Yanchun Zhang is a Policy Specialist with UNDP's Office of Development Studies, with research interests in international macroeconomics, climate change and development, economic vulnerabilities and social policies.