As 2009's storm season begins, Haiti holds its breath.

Tropical Storm Hanna was one of several that battered Haiti last year. It devastated the city of Gonaives.

SOT Atela Dorcelie
Mother

"On Wednesday morning I went to look for my house and I didn't recognize where I was. The rains and flooding had destroyed everything."

To prepare for this year, UNICEF is working with the European Commission Humanitarian Aid department, or ECHO.

Pre-positioned supplies will ensure that if a storm hits, emergency response can begin as soon as possible.

SOT Steve Abbott
UNICEF Water & Sanitation Specialist

"Bad water is almost as bad as no water at all. Children once they get diarrheal diseases. Dehydration can kill a child in hours, literally in hours, not days."

Haiti is the poorest country in the western hemisphere and deforestation has magnified the damage that storms create.

And there's a new sense of urgency for ECHO and UNICEF because of the suffering that remains in the wake of 2008.

SOT Peter Zangl
ECHO Director General

"We have decided to come back more substantially to Haiti with a project dealing with malnutrition, health, water, which we have identified as one of the main factors."
