Storyline:

Her Majesty Queen Rania Al-Abdullah of Jordan visited Pakistan to meet with children and families affected by the devastating South Asia earthquake. Bringing a planeload of relief supplies with her, the Queen hoped to help generate the international support still needed to save the lives of thousands of children.

Voice over:

Queen Rania Al-Abdullah of Jordan saying:

“The children of Pakistan earthquake need you. Many are sick and injured. And now, the outbreak of disease poses an immediate and very real threat. It only takes five dollars to immunize a child and give him, or her, a new lease on life. Help us reach the 4 million children who need protection from disease. Help restore young lives, reshape futures, and rekindle hope for a better tomorrow.”
