RECENT HIGHLIGHTS

- In 2017, the primary response to the increasing protection needs of children exposed to distressing life conditions, continued to be the provision of structured and sustained psychosocial support. The resilience and coping skills of some 412,000 children have been stimulated in children friendly centres, and through the work of mobile teams; of these, some 72,000 children live in HTR and besieged areas.
- Community-based child protection structures helped identifying 1,212 separated and unaccompanied children. 87 children have been reunited with their families, 787 children are living in informal foster care settings, under case managers supervision, while interim residential care is arranged for 26 children.
